WELCOME

OFFICE OF PUBLICATIONS

Illinois State University
Normal, IL. 61761

Dear members of the freshman class:

Welcome and congratulations for selected Illinois State University as the place to continue your studies. You may feel lost at first, as one of the over twenty thousand students who come from every state in the midwest.

Illinois State University affords many opportunities for every student. Although pursuit of your academic program is your main reason for being here, a college education is much more than a formal classroom. I would strongly suggest that you get acquainted with the various activities that are available to you as a student, to learn about the many organizations that are on this campus, and to participate in as much of our campus life as is appropriate for your development.

I hope as you move through the university over the next few years, that you will grow to know and love that which makes Illinois State such a special place. My challenge to you is to give your best to the university, and I can assure you will receive much more than an education.

My best wishes for a successful tenure at Illinois State. If I can ever be of assistance to you do not hesitate to let me know. My door is always open!

Sincerely,

Bob Stegall

Did you know ...

You should carry your I. D. with at all time?

Studying would require more time and effort than it did in high school?

There are other things to do at college besides study?

Free on-campus activities are a great way to meet new people?

Roommates can be good friends especially if you're a good friend?

The library is more than a quiet place to read - great for research, finding the latest magazine and making friends?

Typing is practically a survival skill?

There are other things to do at college besides party?

Overloading your schedule, academically or otherwise, could be dangerous?

Teachers want to answer your questions?

Computers can be friendly?

A Coke and a bag of chips are not the ideal dinner substitute?

Buying a parking permit is cheaper than paying three parking tickets you'll probably get the first month on campus if you don't buy a permit?

A healthy snack, an apple or carrot sticks, for example, will keep you alert during an exam?

The three golden rules: whites are washed in hot, darks in cold and permanent press in warm?

Valuable things have a way of disappearing?

A hair drier is not the only necessity of life - don't forget quarters for the washer, an umbrella, aspirin, a dictionary, light bulbs, hangers, an alarm clock, calculator and a combination bottle and can opener?

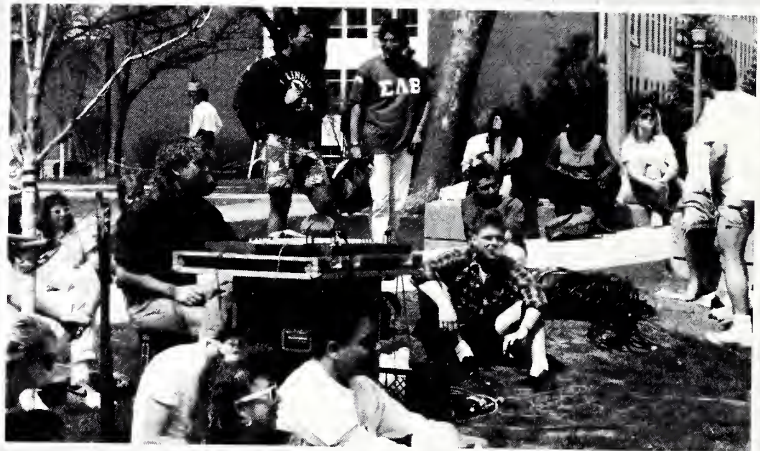

Cheering for the home team can be lots of fun even if you've never been interested in sports?

There's another world off-campus worth exploring, especially Bloomington-Normal

The Path to a New Life

The years you spend here offer you many opportunities for learning and personal growth. If you take advantage of them, you will ...

Make choices, from the right course to the right friends. Decide what's right for you

For the first time, make decisions without advice from anyone.

Deal with the panic, the confusion, the depression, the loneliness and the pressure by yourself; and thus, be better prepared to face these problems throughout your life.

Balance your personal academic needs

-learning never to neglect one for the other

Control your future, taking the steps that will help you achieve your own special goal.

Work hard toward becoming economically independent.

Be responsible for your thoughts, your words and your actions because you're finally on your own.

Accept the disappointments and celebrate the achievements.

Most of all, enjoy becoming an educated and happy individual.

Words of Wisdom

"It is harder to conceal ignorance than to acquire knowledge."

Arnold H. Glosgow

There is nothing easier for a young person today than to attend college, and nothing harder than to get an education.

GREEK ORGANIZATIONS

Greek Organizations were established by students who felt a need to enrich their college life through the companionship of congenial friends. They did so not only because it is instinctive for individuals to want to associate with those whom they like and respect but because most individuals develop best in the midst of friends and stimulating surroundings. Fraternities, sororities and societies are groups involved in the business of learning: learning to live and work with people, learning to share experience and ideas, learning principles of leadership and human relations, learning tolerance and consideration.

Greek Organizations serve as homes away from home, places where students can relax and learn in a spirit of brotherhood or sisterhood, and grow in the living workshop of fraternal association. There is no type of student who best fits into a fraternity, sorority or society. In fact, the greater the variety of interests and backgrounds among the members, the stronger the organization. Every fraternity, sorority and society can give one an opportunity to develop his or her individual interests and abilities.

In a Greek Organization, you will find others who care about how you are doing and who have the experience to help you succeed in all aspects of college life including study. It is a fact that fraternity men get better grades because of high academic standards, better study conditions and tutoring assistance.

Choosing the right fraternity, sorority or society is not as difficult as it may seem. First, judge each organization by its members and its ideals, not by the size of the brotherhood or sisterhood or the trophies on the mantle. You are choosing a group with whom you will become lifelong friends. Their ideals, standards and character are more important to you than chapter reputation. You will probably find more than one organization with members who meet with your approval. At this point you should compare their accomplishments, their various programs and the overall atmosphere in each group. Some important things to consider are the members' scholastic record, the spirit with which they live and work together, their activities on campus, their social and athletic programs and the strength of their national organization and alumni support.

When you find the organization which measures up to your standards, don't hesitate. Let them know you would like to pledge. Greek life can be an important part of your college education. If you use the approach outlined here you will have no trouble in selecting a fraternity, sorority or society that is right for you. Join now. The rewards are lifelong!

The College Scene

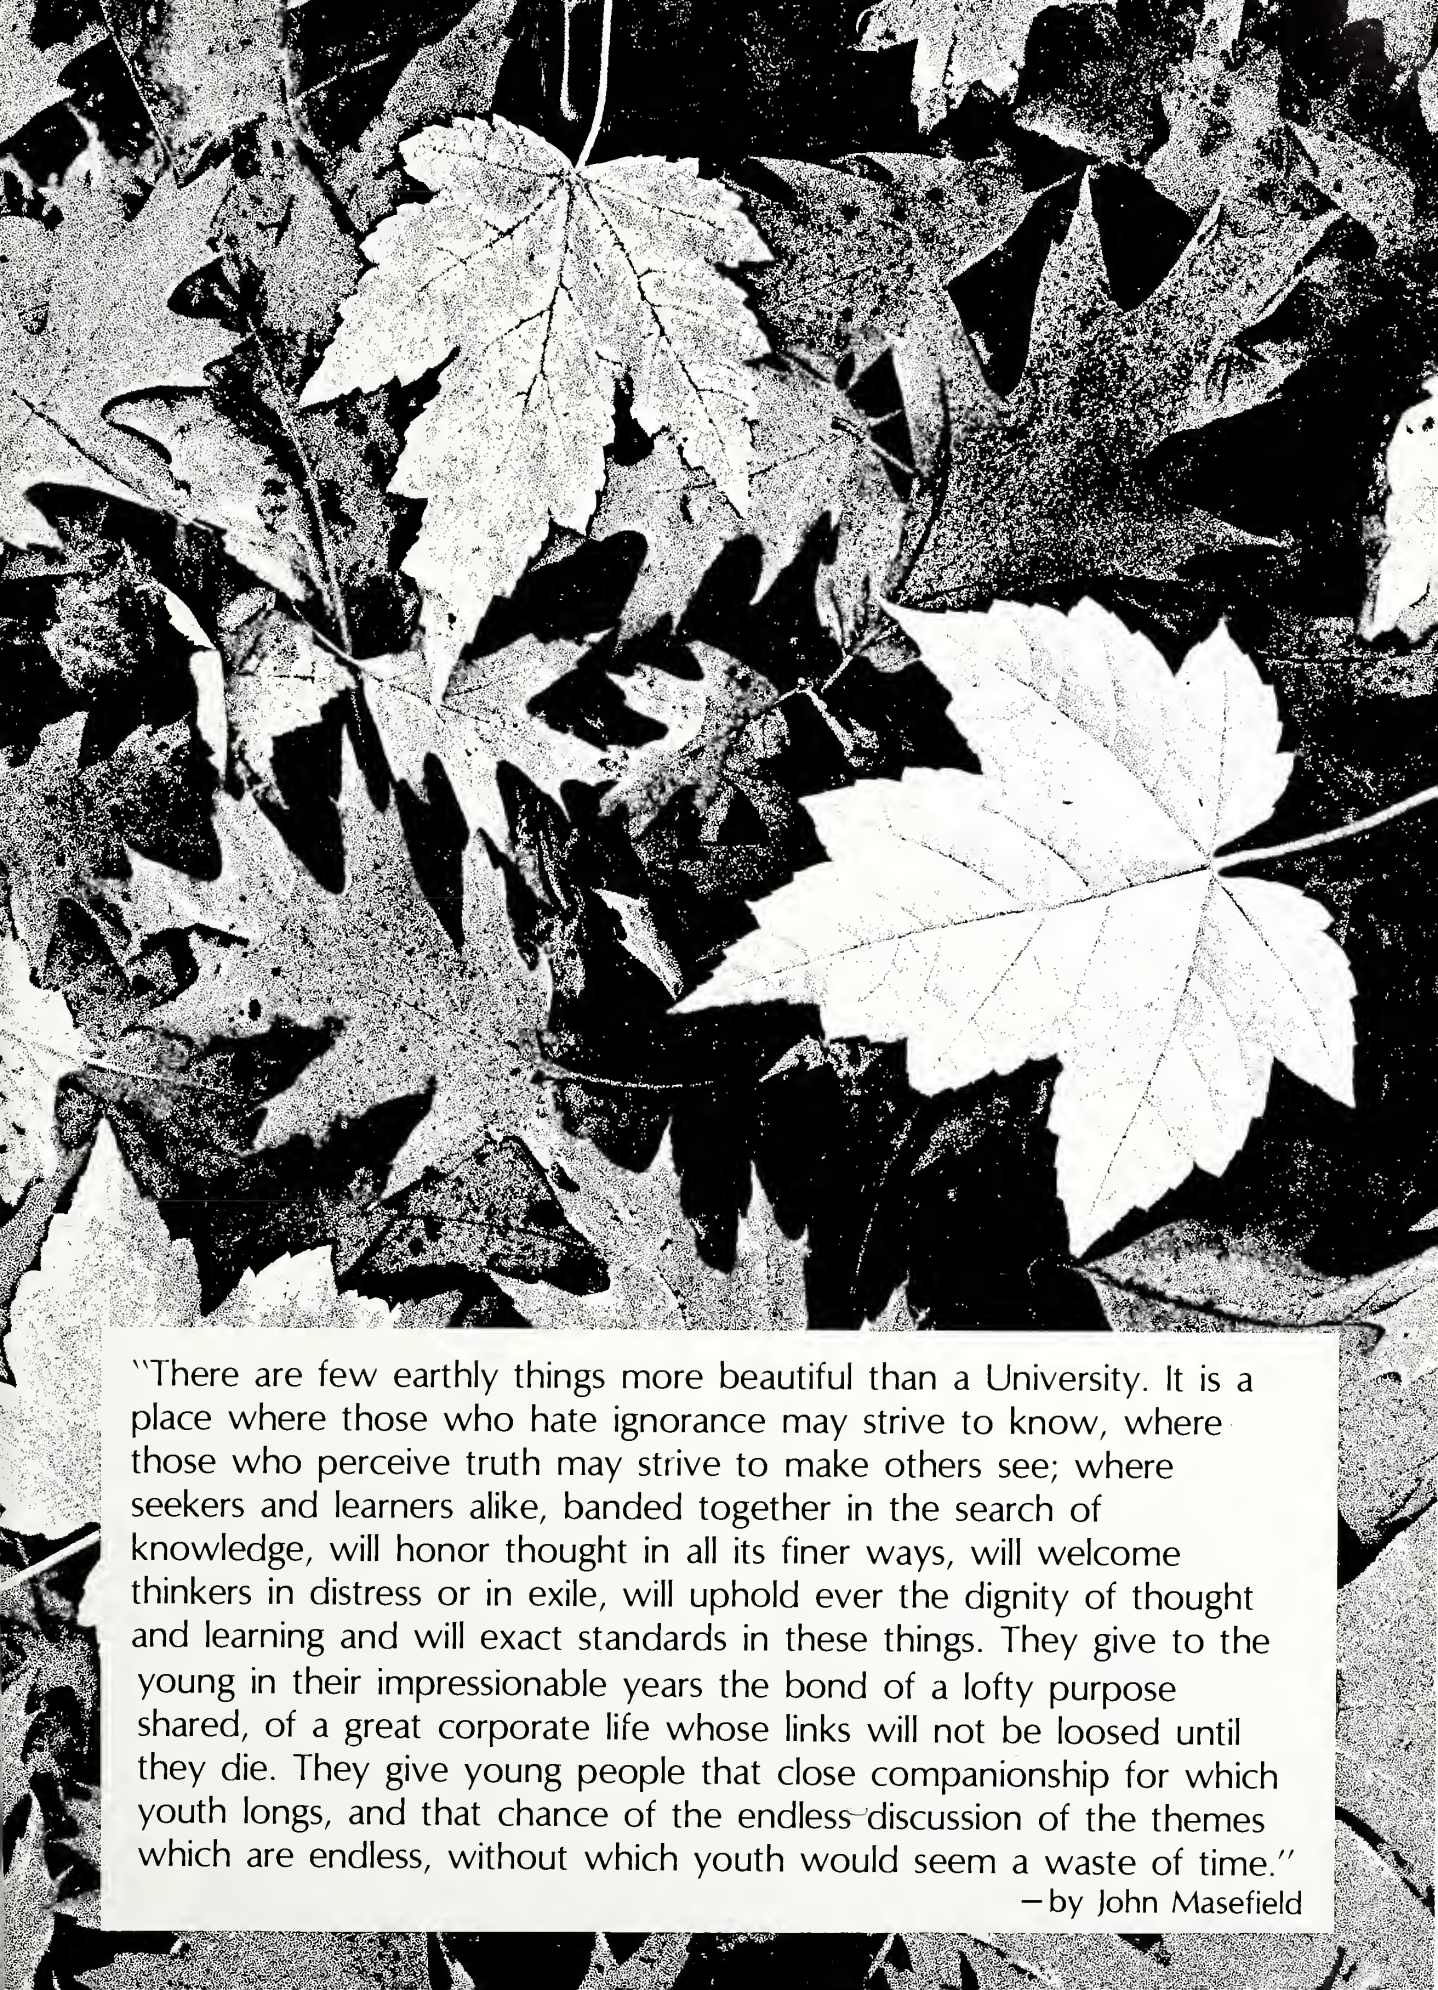

This will become a frequently used building

"The true university" some one said a century ago, "is a collection of books." Today your college library is more than a "study tank". Besides books and magazines, its stock with cassettes, art and photographic reproductions, recordings of speeches, poetry and play all kinds of music and more librarians are on hand to help acquaint you to find what you're looking for. Cash in on this treasure, not only for your work, but for your pleasure.

The Faculty is a tremendous resource out of the class as well as in.

"There are few earthly things more beautiful than a University. It is a place where those who hate ignorance may strive to know, where those who perceive truth may strive to make others see; where seekers and learners alike, banded together in the search of knowledge, will honor thought in all its finer ways, will welcome thinkers in distress or in exile, will uphold ever the dignity of thought and learning and will exact standards in these things. They give to the young in their impressionable years the bond of a lofty purpose shared, of a great corporate life whose links will not be loosed until they die. They give young people that close companionship for which youth longs, and that chance of the endless discussion of the themes which are endless, without which youth would seem a waste of time."

—by John Masefield

Life At “Home” . . .

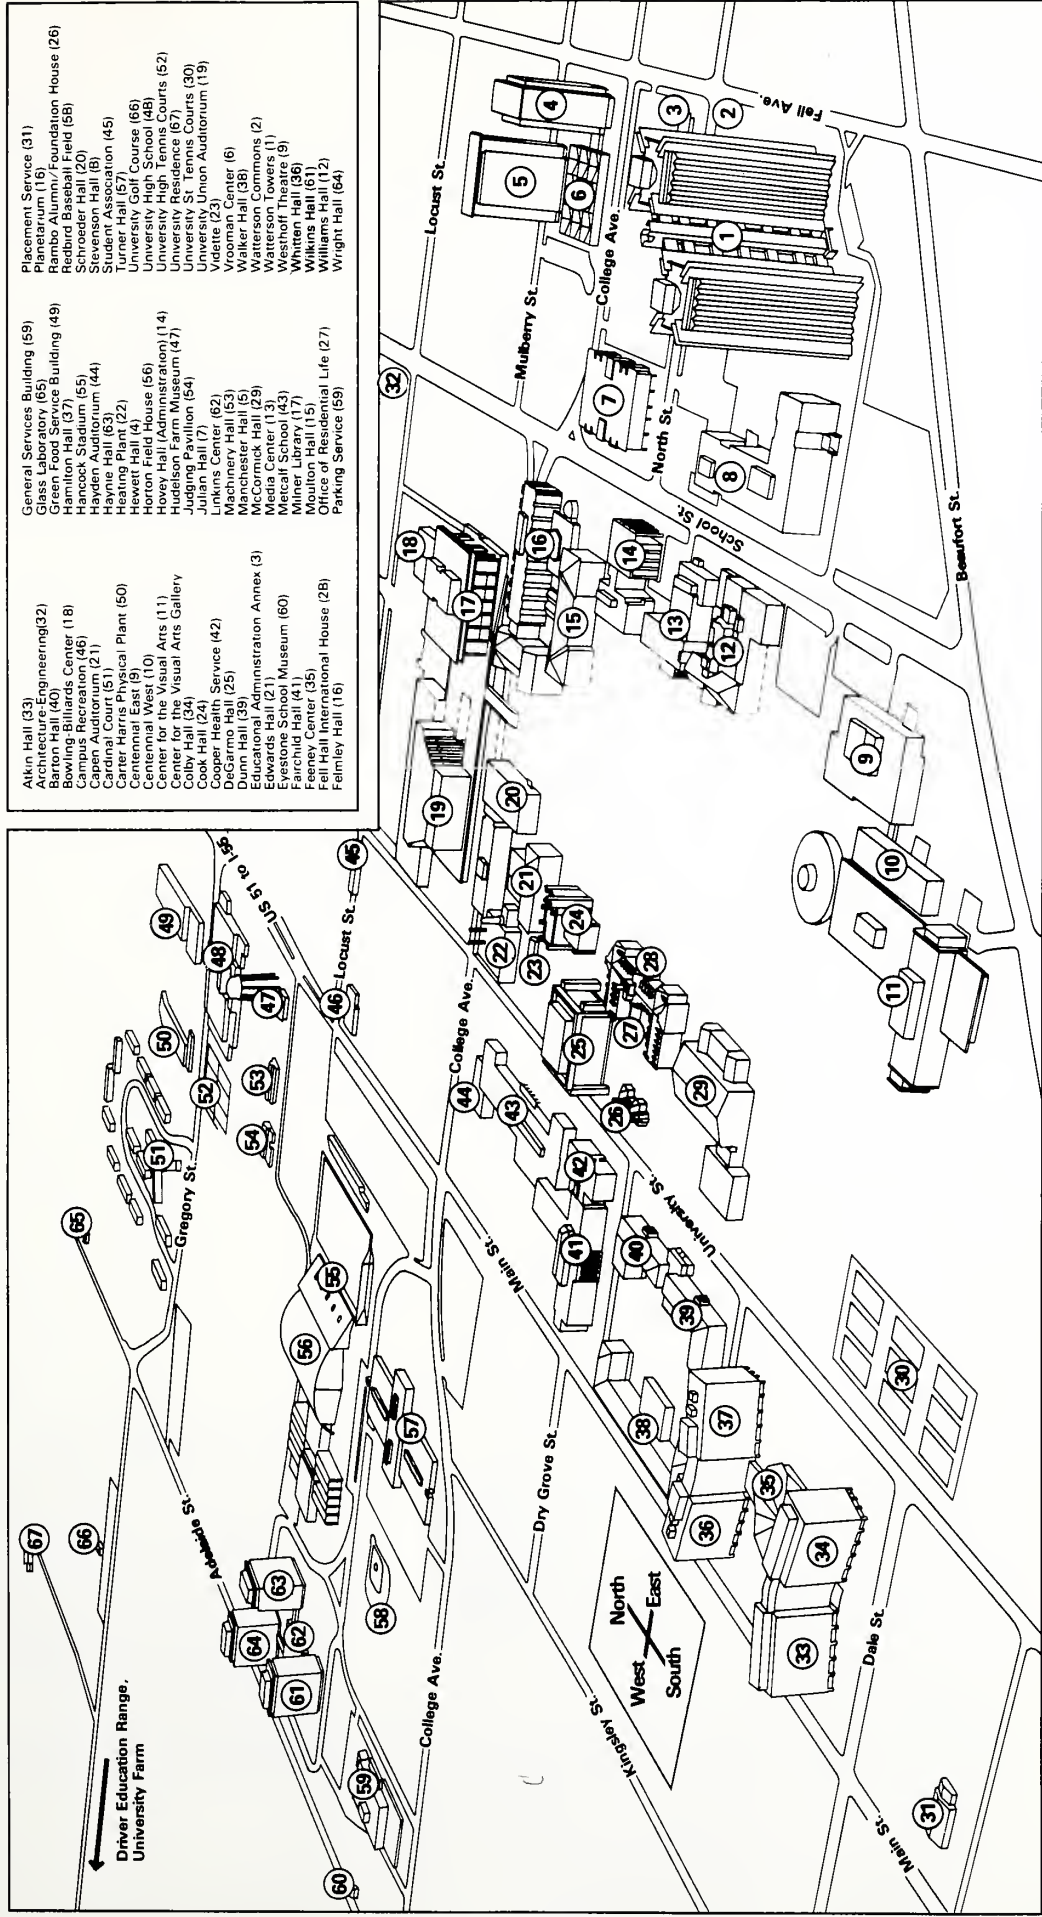

Roommates and Residence Halls

Living in a university residence hall bring with it many changes and new adjustments. For most students this means becoming accustomed to less privacy, less space and perhaps more distractions than they have been used to while living at home. Most importantly, one of the first major adjustments to college life comes in meeting and dealing with that person who is to be your roommate. In learning to share both new ideas and a common living space, roommates can provide each other with many opportunities for personal development. Many students begin their adjustment to residence hall living with the expectation that their roommates will become one of their closest friends and will be a ready-made companion. While this is often the case for many students, it is quite possible to enjoy an effective relationship with a roommate who does not become a close friend. Indeed many roommates discover that their personal habit, values, and needs are quite different. Roommates may become close friends, by the first step is to become good roommates. This often means agreeing about such things as study hours, visitors, and common property. Discussing topics like these in advance of possible differences and conflicts can set a tone of openness and respect and prevent future crisis. In fact, even when two individuals find that they share much in common, some conflicts are inevitable. Laying ground rule, making plans in advance for ways to resolve differences, and even planning regular times to air complaints can be a useful strategy. When conflicts are not easily resolved or problems appear to be too difficult for the roommate to manage, Resident Advisors and the staff member from the Office Residence Life and University Counseling Services can assist roommates in resolving these differences.

Redbird Athletics

One of the best things about college life is the football games . . . Well, okay, they all are great. And it's even more fun to attend when your a student.

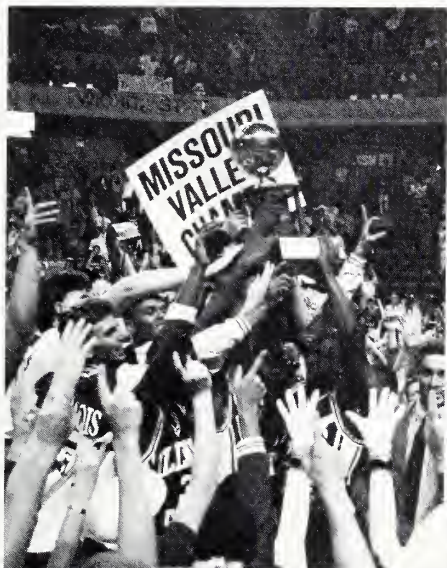

But most freshmen don't realize they too can be a part of Redbird sports. Whether you choose intramural competition which ranges from racquetball to football, or shooting some hoops in the Rec Center, sporting events abound at ISU.

So be a closet football hero or show your prowess in the swimming pool. It doesn't matter how great you are just so long as you play, and enjoy it.
